

“A LOOK AT THE LGBT LIBERATION MOVEMENT SHOWS THAT HUMAN RIGHTS ARE NOT THE ISSUE”

In an Opinion Editorial letter to the newspaper, Israel Nation News, blogger Rafael Castro wrote the following astounding blog, 20th August 2018, which wraps up the case for many who up till now felt great sympathy for recent LGBT activism.

“As a religious conservative living in a liberal city – Berlin – I was torn between loyalty to tradition and respect for individual freedoms on the issue of gay marriages. What eventually swayed me to support gay organizations in this field was the argument that alternative definitions for marriages are a human right.

I thus sided with the LGBT liberation movement with the hope that once such marriages were legal, the issue would be behind us and the energies exhausted in this fractious debate would be channeled to fight far more serious abuses of human rights in Africa, Asia and the Middle East.

These expectations have been bitterly disappointed. To the best of my knowledge the LGBT lobby has done next to nothing in order to help gays and lesbians who are whipped and stoned in nations like Saudi Arabia and Iran.

Instead of championing genuine human rights, it has promoted the issue of transsexuality, blowing it out of all proportion, and has declared war on our historical and science-based understanding of sex and gender.

In its obsession for blurring all gender differences it is pressuring the academic and culture establishments to erase any awareness of gender differences from the youngest of children and harassing any person who refuses to endorse this gender ideology. In addition, it has even encouraged voices demanding that incest, polygamy and pedophilia be normalized in our societies.

In other words, I supported same-sex marriage rights with the understanding that I was contributing to defend human rights. Instead my support has been exploited by the sexual liberation movement to undermine the values and paradigms that give society its bearings and guidance to minors who are vulnerable in their development.

I feel betrayed and angry. From now on I will fight every progressive social cause, regardless of the language used to market it.

It is evident that today's progressives are more interested in dismantling Western society than in repairing its relatively minor flaws.

Looking back, I see that same-sex civil unions gave homosexuals all the legal and fiscal rights they needed. These civil unions respected the rights of all parties, without encouraging extremists to assault heteronormativity and bi-genderism. That's how things should remain."

— — —

Note from the editors team:

On Breaking Israel News, we read concerning this ISIS-flag shown above:

"After Walmart refused Chuck Netzhammer's request for a cake with an image of the Confederate flag printed on it with a banner reading "Heritage, Not Hate", Netzhammer returned with a different image: the ISIS battle flag. This time, Walmart made the cake."

Screenshot from a video showing an ISIS cake made by Walmart.

Would you believe it?